

Flora of New Jersey Project 2016 Membership

The Flora of New Jersey Project was founded in 2004 to further the understanding, appreciation, and preservation of the flora of New Jersey. One of its many tasks is to provide a series of publications to facilitate these goals. The major, long-term goals of the Project are the publication of a Manual of the Flora of New Jersey and an Atlas of the Flora of New Jersey. Presently, botanists from the Project are reviewing collections in regional herbaria, compiling plant information for the project web site (njflora.rutgers.edu and njflora.org).

To facilitate these programs, we are asking interested individuals and organizations to become members of the Flora of NJ Project. Members will receive periodic updates on the progress of the Project and will receive recognition on the web site. Any member wishing to volunteer for herbarium work, contribute data or digital photographs, or make other scientific contributions should contact Joe Arsenault (856-697-6044) or any of the Committee Chairs listed on the Project web site (www.njflora.org).

Financial and institutional support will help the Project to become firmly established and the authoritative location for New Jersey's wild plants. The Flora of New Jersey is a State of New Jersey non-profit corporation. The Flora also has a federal Section 501 (c) 3 private non-profit organization status. All checks should be made out to Flora of NJ Project, Inc.
